Many return for jobs with tribe

Tribal officials increase about 20 percent with the opening last Thursday of the new Diamond-Noga Highway casino & hotel. Despite the windfall, local tribes have fallen short of mandates that they use gaming revenues to become more self sufficient, develop their economies and build stronger governments, a investigation found. The Tohono O'odham Nation's per capita federal spending, when adjusted turning to gangs to fill their free time. The tribe invested $30 million nearly two years ago to build five youth centers to young people an native to gangs, but there's no telling yet whether they've made a difference. Gangs lure kids away from school. Dropout rates at the tribe's Baboquivari High School are spiraling — up to 26 percent in 2005-06 from just under 16 percent five earlier — cutting into the pool of applicants
